

pink diamond Pionersky Diamond pinpoint

Contributed by Administrator
Sunday, 23 September 2007

pink diamond. A fancy diamond. A term often used loosely in the trade to describe any light red, light purple or light purplish-red diamond. Those other than light red are sometimes described by such terms as rose pink, rose colored, peach blossom and heliotrope. See le grand conde' dia-mond, PEACH-BLOSSOM DIAMOND, WILLIAMSON DIAMOND, NUR-UL-AIN DIAMOND, DARYA-I-NUR DIAMOND, PRINCIE DIAMOND, WINSTON PINK DIAMOND.

pinpoint. (1) Any small rounded inclusion seen at 10x but not large enough to be discernible as an included crystal. (2) Essentially, the same as "carbon spots" which are somewhat more likely to be opaque. Pionersky Diamond. One of many large (weight unreported) named rough diamond crystals in the Russian Diamond Fund at the Kremlin. pipe. The common name for a vertical, cylindrical or columnlike mass of rock that cooled and solidified in the neck of a volcano. When these rock masses are composed of kimberlite, they sometimes contain diamonds. Although the kimberlite in the various pipes is similar, the pipes themselves differ in size and shape and in the kind of diamonds they produce. Kimberlite pipes occur in Arkansas, India, the Republic of South Africa, the Republic of Zaire, Russia and elsewhere. See kimberlite.